■ Editorial

Dear Readers,

This issue is dedicated to all the official translators of the latest Harry Potter novel who, all around the world, are working frantically to meet deadlines so that translated versions of "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows" will arrive in shops as soon after the English version as possible. While we all have deadlines to meet, theirs are rather more high profile than most! The various leaks and pirated versions will do nothing to ease their stress (see page 6). So, although most of us are envious of the job they do, for just the next few weeks, we also offer (a little) sympathy.

After a small hiatus, the bulletin is back to (I hope) amuse and inform. Don't miss the article by Alda Gómez on mistranslations around the world. It is guaranteed to ease the post-holiday blues.

Enjoy!

A spokesman from the Courts Service said, "Increased ethnic diversity has seen us provide for interpretation of the spoken word in up to 210 different languages and dialects. Until recently, this was provided from a panel of reputable agencies and companies with whom we have established links over several years. To ensure the quality of the system is maintained, improved and that access to the best available interpretation is achieved, the Courts Service recently went to international tender to seek bidders for a single service provider of interpretation services. The cost of this service will be approximately €2m per year. We have provided for a 20-fold increase in the amount invested in this service since 2000," the Courts Service confirmed. "We pay €46 per hour for this service. The most common languages include Cantonese, Mandarin, French, Romanian, Russian and Irish." Interpreters recruited by Lionbridge this year are understood to earn approximately €20 per hour.

The cost of interpreting services are being reported on quite regularly in the Irish media often with the suggestion that the costs are huge.

On the contrary, €2m is not a vast sum of money to the Courts Service. They are paying for a service that guarantees the human rights of all people in this country, regardless of their origins. One has to wonder if this continued focus on the cost of language service stems from a veiled anti-immigration standpoint.

■ ITIA meeting for community interpreters

There will be another meeting of community interpreters on Tuesday 18th September at the Irish Writers' Centre from 6.30pm to 8.30pm. This time, some researchers from Farrell Grant Sparks (FGS) will attend because they would like to obtain feedback from interpreters and translators about their work. The FGS research is being funded by the Reception and Integration Agency and the project is managed by the Reception and Integration Agency and by the National Consultative Committee on Racism and Interculturalism. If you would like your views to be heard, please come along.

■ Interpreting Services cost Courts €2m

The Irish Independent reported in July that the Courts Service of Ireland will pay €2m for interpreting services this year. The figure was just €103,000 in 2000. The company profiting from this is Lionbridge who won the contract to be the sole provider of interpreting services to the courts. Lionbridge employs 500 people and is in the first of a four-year contract with the Courts Service.

Joining the ITIA

The Irish Translators' & Interpreters' Association is always delighted to welcome new members to the Association. There are five categories of membership:

- ◆ Ordinary
- ◆ Professional
- ◆ Corporate
- ◆ Concession (undergraduate & senior citizen)
- ◆ Honorary

Ordinary membership is open to anyone with an interest in translating or interpreting. Professional membership is for those who meet strict criteria set by the professional membership committee of the ITIA and which is part of the drive to raise the status of the profession in the European market.

Corporate membership is for firms and agencies associated with the profession while concession membership is for undergraduate students engaged in third level language and/or translation studies and senior citizens. Finally, honorary membership is intended for national and international persons who have distinguished themselves in our professional field.

For more information on how to join as well as for the relevant application forms, visit the ITIA website at: www.translatorsassociation.ie

■ English well talking

After such a sorrowful summer in rainy Dublin, putting our hopes in sunshine every month to be deceived over and again, we are ready to embark on a trip somewhere, anywhere, far from this chaotic cold weather. But we don't intend to travel alone. We would like to invite all of the ITIA translators on a very special tour to a paradise of imperfections, errors, and mistranslations. This trip may bring heartfelt smiles and some concern to our translators' souls. I would advise you to sell your soul to the devil just this once, take a deep breath, relax, and let your laughs be heard.

First, we'll go to sunny Mediterranean Spain to catch some vitamin D, and maybe gather some Spaniards for our trip as we see in a Malaga freeway: "Locals for sale or rent". Are we going to have enough cash? We decide to ask for help in a Majorcan shop where "English well talking, Here speaking American".

Enough of this Spanish nonsense, we decide to continue our tour in Bohemian Paris; we will not be deceived there. And we are not, as we come across a pretty liberal signpost in a shop: "Dresses for street walking". This gets out of proportion in a Parisian hotel: "Please leave your values at the front desk". Enough! We sigh and try to catch some air. Maybe we need a drink, but having had enough of Paris, we find ourselves in Switzerland, at an uncommon restaurant where: "Our wines leave you nothing to hope for". And there is no doubt we are running out of hope until we find some tricky suggestions in a Zurich hotel: "Because of the impropriety of entertaining guests of the opposite sex in the bedroom, it is suggested that the lobby be used for this purpose". Shocked, we head to northern Europe to cool down. Will we be allowed to? In a Copenhagen airline ticket office: "We take your bags and send them in all directions". And in a Norwegian cocktail lounge: "Ladies are requested not to have children at the bar". Enough! Shall we give another chance to southern Europe after all? Yes, let's. We are running out of energy, and we are considering a consultation with a Roman doctor until we see a sign in his waiting room: "Specialist in women and other diseases". Now, we are really sick. Maybe we need some mind cleaning, but we could start with our clothes. In a laundry in Rome: "Ladies, leave your clothes here and spend the afternoon having a good time". Now, this is more like it! We are starting to enjoy our holiday: so many hidden languages, so many nuances, and so many cultural traits. Now that we are having a good time, we gather our strength to continue our journey in Eastern Europe.

We arrive to a totally different world, and we know it. Everything is well taken care of, and things are explained thoroughly. In the former Yugoslavia, our lingerie is getting a fair treatment: "The flattening of the underwear with pleasure is the job of the chambermaid". And our choice of food in a Polish hotel menu is highly balanced: "Salad a firm's own make; limpid red beet soup with cheesy dumplings in the form of a finger; roasted duck let loose; beef rashers beaten up in the country people's fashion". Yet, we are experiencing some technical problems in our elevators in Bucharest and Belgrade respectively: "The lift is being fixed for the next day. During that time we regret that you will be unbearable" and "To move the cabin, push button for wishing floor. If the cabin should enter more persons, each one should press a number of wishing floor. Driving is then going alphabetically by national order". Enough! As we wish to forget about these technicalities, we decide to return to nature to find some starving individuals in a zoo: "Please do not feed the animals. If you have any suitable food, give it to the guard on duty". Nature is not so generous after all. Will Moscow be able to change our moods after the strange occurrences we have experienced on our trip? On our way to the capital of the former USSR, we read in a Soviet weekly: "There will be a Moscow Exhibition of Arts by 15,000 Soviet Republic painters and sculptors. These were executed over the past two years". Scary! But let's give it another chance. In the lobby of a Moscow hotel across from a Russian Orthodox monastery: "You are welcome to visit the cemetery where famous Russian and Soviet composers, artists, and writers are buried daily except Thursday". Are translators also in the bunch? Let's get out of here! Fast! We are so close to Asia. Let's visit some of the sites. Asia will no doubt be marvellous. Our destination is legendary Thailand, where our morals will be absolutely smashed. In a Bangkok dry cleaner's: "Drop your trousers here for best results". What kind of results should we expect? Maybe there is a hint in this advertisement for donkey rides: "Would you like to ride on your own ass?" Enough! Feeling embarrassed by all this explicit vocabulary, we decide to go to a temple: "It is forbidden to enter a woman even a foreigner if dressed as a man". Pardon? In Hong Kong, we are definitely getting seriously ill as we see in a tailor's shop: "Ladies may have a fit upstairs", and looking for a doctor, we arrive confused at a dentist surgery: "Teeth extracted by the latest Methodists". After our experience in the temple, we are becoming agnostics, and we start to doubt the Methodist practices too. Maybe we can find an answer in Japan. In Tokyo, we may not find an answer, but we surely find a new way of communicating in a brochure for a car rental firm in Tokyo: "When passenger of foot heave in sight, tootle the horn. Trumpet him melodiously at first, but if he still obstacles your passage then tootle him with vigor". Japan is absolutely different to what we have experienced so far. In a bar they serve: "Special cocktails for the ladies with nuts", and in a hotel: "You are invited to take advantage of the chambermaid". If you are starting to feel dizzy, do not panic. Read this Japanese information booklet about using a hotel air conditioner: "Cooles and Heates: If you want just condition of warm in your room, please control yourself".

We are trying to control ourselves, but we can't. We are trying to have a few laughs, but the issue at hand is not funny at all. We are professionals who can recognize a bad translation undertaken by a pseudo-translator who does not master the language into which he/she translates. We can see beyond that. We can see a company trying to save a few bucks or unaware of translation issues. We can see an individual, not necessarily a translator, with some knowledge of English agreeing to translate a text. We can see many other errors everywhere confusing target audiences, not always amusing. As the rain keeps on falling in August in Dublin, please allow me to shout: Enough!

Alda Goméz

■ From Our Lips to Your Ears

Communication. Not much in this world can happen without it. Yet day after day, millions of people around the world communicate in spite of the fact that they do not share a common language. And it's largely thanks to interpreters. Whether it's rendering the nurse's encouraging words as a woman delivers a baby in the local hospital, carefully conveying the messages of foreign diplomats, converting the judge's decision accurately into another language in the courtroom, or interpreting a phone call during a life-threatening emergency, interpreters are helping our world go 'round.

The From Our Lips to Your Ears project is a testament to the important work that interpreters do each and every day. This compendium of real-life interpreter anecdotes is a first-of-its-kind project that aims to memorialize the experiences of interpreters in order to enable readers to gain a greater appreciation of this incredibly complex and fascinating profession.

Interpreters, share your stories with the world. Associations, spread the word to your members.

■ Graduate Certificate in Community Interpreting at Dublin City University

The GCCI is a one semester, part time course for interpreters who work or wish to work in Garda stations, hospitals and the courts. The next intake is at the end of September and we would particularly welcome Polish speakers because we will be offering Polish Interpreting Practice (4 hours a week) along with the three core modules Introduction to Interpreting, Ethics and Terminology. Speakers of Russian, Romanian and French would be welcome to take the three core modules.

■ Teen Translators infringe Harry Potter copyright...again

In early August, a 16-year-old French boy was arrested and held in custody overnight for posting his own translation of the latest and last in the Harry Potter series on the Internet. The official version is to be released in October, which is apparently too long to wait for avid Potter fans. The unofficial translation was released within days of the book's English language release date. The speed of this has prompted some to suggest that it was in fact a collaborative work. The pirate was released on to a website in pdf format. The website has since been shut down. The police said they were surprised by the quality of the work which they considered of "semi-professional" standard.

On the other side of the world, dozens of illegal Chinese versions of the book have been released on the internet. Teenagers on their summer holidays reportedly bought the English copies as soon as bookstores opened, and started translating. They worked in teams and round the clock, eating nothing but instant noodles, according to messages they left on the Internet. The various teams give themselves names, the most famous are the Hogwarts Institute of Translation and the International Wizard Alliance.

This surge in subterfuge translation is a by-product of the phenomenal success of the Harry Potter series. Although the translators are novices, their obvious passion for the subject carries them through. However, we must spare a thought for the official translators on whom these leaks must put ever-greater pressure.

■ Legislation - Polish Example

We, in Ireland, are still fighting for recognition and status for translators/interpreters. There is little in Irish law to cover what we do and how we do it. As an example of what can be done if the will is there, here is an extract from the Polish Act on the profession that covers the areas of accountability, qualifications, examinations, rules of practice etc. For the full text, see <http://www.tepis.org.pl/biuletyn/56/act.htm>

*ACT OF 25 NOVEMBER 2004 ON THE PROFESSION OF SWORN TRANSLATOR

Chapter 1.

General Provisions

Article 1. 1. This Act defines the conditions and procedure for obtaining and losing the right to practise the profession of sworn translator, as well as the rules for practising the said profession.

2. The provisions of this Act shall not apply to sign language interpreters and translators of communication systems other than natural languages.

Chapter 2.

Obtaining and Losing the Right to Practise the Profession of Sworn Translator

2. The command of the Polish language shall be confirmed by passing the examination for sworn translators.

Article 3. 1. The State Examination Commission, hereinafter referred to as the "Commission", shall be hereby established to conduct examinations for sworn translators.

2. Members of the Commission shall be appointed and recalled by the Minister of Justice in a decision.

3. The Commission shall be composed of 11 members, distinguished by a high level of knowledge in the field of foreign languages as well as translation and interpretation techniques

Article 4. 1. The examination for sworn translators shall consist of two parts:

- ◆ 1) translation from the Polish language into the foreign language and from the foreign language into the Polish language;
- ◆ 2) interpretation from the Polish language into the foreign language and from the foreign language into the Polish language.

2. The examination for sworn translators shall be considered passed if positive marks have been awarded for both parts of the examination mentioned in paragraph 1.

3. In the event of unsatisfactory result of the examination, the candidate for sworn translator may take another examination not earlier than after the lapse of one year from the date of the previous examination.

Article 5. 1. A person who has passed the examination defined in Article 4, paragraph 1 shall obtain a licence to practise the profession of sworn translator.

2. Obtaining a licence to practise the profession of sworn translator shall be confirmed by a certificate issued by the Minister of Justice.

Article 6. 1. A person who has obtained the right to practise the profession of sworn translator shall obtain the right to practise this profession after taking an oath and being entered on the list of list of sworn translators.

2. A person who has obtained the right to practise the profession of sworn translator shall be entered, upon the said person's application, onto the list of sworn translators kept by the Minister of Justice.

3. The Minister of Justice shall define, by way of a regulation, the standard form of the certificate referred to in Article 5, paragraph 2, and the manner of keeping the list of sworn translators, taking into account the possibility of keeping the said list in an electronic form.

Article 7. 1. Sworn translators shall take with the Minister of Justice the following oath:

“Being aware of the significance of my words and my liability before the law, I do solemnly affirm that I will perform the tasks of sworn translator entrusted to me with due diligence and impartiality, keeping State secrets and other secrets protected by the law, as well as following, in my conduct, the rules of honesty and professional ethics.”

2. Sworn translators shall have the duty to report any change in the data included in the entry on the list within 30 days from the day when the circumstances arose justifying the reporting of a change. The documents being the grounds for changing the entry shall be enclosed or submitted with the notification.

Article 9. 1. By 31 January each year, the Minister of Justice shall publish, in the form of an announcement, in the official journal issued thereby, the list of sworn translators, notifying the voivodes thereof.

2. Voivodes shall gratuitously make the lists of sworn translators publicly available in places designated for this purpose, on the premises and during the office hours of voivodeship offices.

3. The announcement and the lists referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 shall not contain the data mentioned in Article 8, subparagraphs 2, 4 and 9.

Article 10. The Minister of Justice shall make the list of sworn translators available, save for the data referred to in Article 8, subparagraphs 2, 4 and 9, in the Biuletyn Informacji Publicznej, established pursuant to the provisions on access to public information.

Article 11. 1. The Minister of Justice may suspend a sworn translator, by way of a decision, for a period of 5 years, in the performance of activities of sworn translator in the event of failure to perform such activities for a period of over 3 years, counting from the day of the last activity.

2. During the period of suspension, the Minister of Justice may, upon a justified application of the sworn translator, set aside the decision referred to in paragraph 1.

Chapter 3.

Rules for Practising the Profession of Sworn Translator

Article 13. Sworn translators shall be licensed to:

1) prepare and certify translations from a foreign language into the Polish language, from the Polish language into the foreign language, as well as to verify and certify such translations prepared by other persons;

2) prepare certified copies of documents in a foreign language, verify and certify copies of documents prepared in the given language by other persons;

3) interpret.

Article 14. Sworn translators shall be obliged to:

1) perform the tasks with which they are entrusted with particular diligence and impartiality, in compliance with the rules resulting from the provisions of law;

2) maintain as confidential the facts and circumstances with which they became familiar in connection with translation and/or interpretation;

3) improve their professional qualifications.

Article 15. Sworn translators may not refuse to translate and/or interpret in proceedings conducted under statutory law, upon request of a court, public prosecutor, the Police and public administration authorities, unless there are particularly valid reasons justifying such refusal.

Article 16. 1. The remuneration for the activities of sworn translator shall be fixed, subject to paragraphs 2 and 3, in the contract with the principal or the person ordering the specific translation and/or interpretation.

2. The Minister of Justice shall fix, by way of a regulation, the rates of remuneration for the activities of sworn translator performed upon request of the entities referred to in Article 15, taking into account the degree of complexity and the scope of the translation and/or interpretation.

3. The Minister of Justice may fix, by way of a regulation, the maximum rates, other than those mentioned in paragraph 2, for the activities of sworn translators, taking into account the degree of complexity and the scope of said activities.

Article 18. 1. Sworn translators shall use, to certify translations and copies of documents, a round seal containing his/her name in the seal's rim and in its midst - the language in which he/she is licensed and the number on the list of sworn translators referred to in Article 6, paragraph 2. The seal shall be ordered, at the expense of the sworn translator, by the Minister of Justice in the State Mint.

2. On certified translations and certified copies of documents issued by the sworn translator there should be the number under which the translation or copy is noted in the repertory. The translations and copies of documents shall state whether they were prepared from an original, translation or copy, and whether the translation or copy is certified and by whom.

Chapter 4.

The Professional Accountability of Sworn Translators

Article 21. 1. Sworn translators who do not discharge the tasks referred to in Articles 14 and 15 and the duties specified in Article 17, paragraph 1 and Article 18, paragraph 2, or who discharge the said tasks or duties improperly or in an unreliable manner shall be subject to professional accountability.

2. In respect of professional Accountability the following penalties may be imposed on a sworn translator:

- ◆ admonition;
- ◆ reprimand;
- ◆ suspension of the right to practise the profession of sworn translator for a period from 3 months to one year;
- ◆ deprivation of the right to practise the profession of sworn translator, with the possibility of applying for granting it again not earlier than 2 years after deprivation and having taken again the examination referred to in Article 2, paragraph 1, subparagraph 6.

Chapter 5.

Amendments to Provisions in Force, Transitional and Final Provisions

Articles 30-32. [Omitted. These Articles contain amendments to other legal instruments.]

Article 33. 1. Persons who obtained the licence of sworn translator under the provisions hitherto in force shall become sworn translators within the meaning of this Act provided that they are entered, upon their application, on the list of sworn translators referred to in Article 6, paragraph 2, within 6 months from the day of this Act's entry into force.

2. With the application referred to in paragraph 1 the sworn translator shall also enclose the certificate issued by the President of the court at which he/she was appointed and confirming the circumstances of his/her appointment as a sworn translator.

3. The provision of paragraph 1 shall not apply to sworn sign language interpreters.

4. The persons referred to in paragraph 1 may perform the acts of sworn translator and use their existing seals of sworn translator until they are entered on the list of sworn translators and obtain the seal of sworn translator, not longer, however, than for 2 years from the day of this Act's entry into force.

Article 34. Within 3 months from the day of this Act's entry into force, the Minister of Justice shall appoint the Commission referred to in Article 3. Article 35. This Act shall enter into force 30 days after the day of promulgation.

- ◆ For the purposes of translation of this Act, the title "sworn translator" shall mean both a translator and an interpreter.
- ◆ Translated by Anna Setkowicz-Ryszka

■ Iraqi interpreters continue to fall

Titan is the California-based company that holds the contract for supplying the U.S. military with Arabic- and Kurdish-speaking linguists. In April, Titan reported a 23% increase in revenues, or $559 million. Its contract with the U.S. Army is its biggest revenue source, worth up to $657 million by the time it expires. The cost has been high as the company has lost more personnel than any other American contractor in Iraq. The U.S. Labor Department reports 126 death benefit claims for Titan workers in Iraq out of a total 305 for contractors as of mid-May. The Titan death toll includes 12 Americans, and possibly some non-linguists, the company said, with another 149 wounded. Interpreting for the U.S./British forces is extremely dangerous on two fronts as you are a target while travelling in military convoys and are specifically targeted by local militia who view interpreters as collaborators with the enemy. Even worse, interpreters have had to fight to be given the same protective gear as the soldiers they travelled with.

So, why are Iraqis willing to do the job? The answer is obvious - money. In a country where most survive on less than $100 per month, interpreters earn between $600 and $1,000 per month. Enough people feel that the rewards are worth the risk and survive by telling nobody what they do for a living and moving around as much as possible. Many now live on U.S. army bases.

And what will the future hold for these workers? If the U.S./British forces pull out of Iraq, these interpreters are not just unemployed but exposed and in danger. Many hope that their assistance will be recognised and an asylum application to one of these countries will be favourably looked upon. This is by no means certain as both U.S. and British immigration authorities have been reticent on the subject. A Defense spokeswoman for the Foreign Office in London said that Britain valued the work of the translators highly and took its responsibilities towards them seriously, but added, "We consider any specific requests for assistance from serving or ex-employees on their individual merits. Should an individual seek to come to Britain, they would need to apply for entry clearance in the usual way." In the U.S., asylum has been granted to just a tiny number of the thousands of Iraqi translators/interpreters, drivers and security guards who work for the Pentagon and its contractors.

Denmark, on the other hand, took their responsibilities to their aides seriously and secretly airlifted 200 people who worked for them including interpreters and their families. Morally, the Danes are certainly on the high ground and only time will tell if the U.S./British governments decide to join them there.

Tenure track position in Translation Studies

The School of Translation at Glendon College, the bilingual Liberal Arts Faculty of York University, invites applications for a tenure-track position in Translation Studies, as part of its policy of expansion of graduate studies. The rank will depend on experience and qualifications. Candidates should be able to teach in English or in French, be suitable for immediate appointment at the Faculty of Graduate Studies, and hold a PhD in Translation Studies or in a cognate discipline.

Requirements: an active research program, and experience in the teaching of Translation Studies at the graduate level. The successful candidate will have multilingual competency that has permitted him/her to supervise graduate work in a variety of languages and/or demonstrated academic work that shows the ability to do so. Preference will be given to candidates who participate in interdisciplinary research groups, and have a sufficiently marked interest in the administration of programs to effectively contribute to the restructuring of the existing Master's degree and the development of a PhD program. Responsibilities include teaching and supervision at the graduate level, research, administration, and teaching in the undergraduate translation studies program. Currently courses are offered in English, French or Spanish. Given Glendon's bilingual mandate, candidates must be able to participate actively in College activities in both French and English.

Applications including a curriculum vitae should be sent to Professor Candace Séguinot, Chair, School of Translation, Glendon College, York University, 2275 Bayview Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M4N 3M6. Candidates should also arrange for three letters of reference to be sent directly to the Chair. At least one of the references should address teaching. All documents should be postmarked no later than October 1, 2007. Date of appointment: July 1, 2008. All positions at York University are subject to budgetary approval.

York University is an Affirmative Action Employer. The Affirmative Action Program can be found on York website at <http://www.yorku.ca/acadjobs> or a copy can be obtained by calling the affirmative action office at 416 736 5713. All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and Permanent Residents will be given priority.

■ Conferences, Calls & Courses

The Sixth International Conference of the Israel Translators Association Translators 2008 - From success to recognition

Jerusalem, Israel, 5-7 February 2008

As in all our previous conferences, the program will cover a wide range of topics in the areas of Translation, Editing, Interpreting, Subtitling, Terminology and Tools, and new technologies. A large section will also be devoted to reflection on accreditation and the status of our profession.

With three concurrent tracks, the program will provide information and opportunities for discussion on many linguistic and professional aspects, including case studies from a wide range of applications.

Anyone interested in delivering a paper is invited to submit an abstract of their proposal by October 31st, 2007 to papers\(a\)ita.org.il.

Presentations should take 30 minutes plus ten minutes for questions. Papers should be in Hebrew or English; other languages will be considered. The abstracts should not exceed 250 words, and should be submitted on a Word document only, together with a short bio (please state your name, telephone number and email address). Also state which language or language pair/s you plan to speak about.

Authors will be informed by November 15th, 2007 of the organizing committee's decision as to whether their proposal has been accepted.

The preliminary program will be published in mid-December 2007 on site: <http://www.ita.org.il>.

Details about accommodation, payment procedure, etc. will be provided in the preliminary program.

For further information and queries about the Conference, please contact Pascale Amozig-Bukszpan, the Conference coordinator, at conf\(a\)ita.org.il.

Save the date!

Aldo and Jeanne Scaglione Prize for a Translation of a Literary Work

Competition in 2008 for Books Published in 2007

The Committee on Honors and Awards of the Modern Language Association invites translators and publishers to compete for the eighth Aldo and Jeanne Scaglione Prize for a Translation of a Literary Work. The prize is awarded each even-numbered year for an outstanding translation into English of a book-length literary work. For the competition held in 2008, translations published in 2007 are eligible. Translators need not be members of the association. The award, which consists of $2,000 and a certificate, will be presented to the winning translator at the association's annual convention in December 2008.
