■ Editorial

Welcome to the May 2004 edition of the ITIA Bulletin. The past month has seen some momentous historical events, with the expansion of the EU by ten new members. Obviously this will bring increased opportunities for translators and interpreters, as well as those working in related areas such as translator and interpreter training, software localisation, subtitling and dubbing, etc.

On May 13th the Irish Independent newspaper published a very interesting article about the general effect this will have on language mediation activities in Ireland. Obviously those of us working with languages of the new EU states can expect to see an increase in demand for our services. However, what is perhaps most interesting is the diversity of fields which this expansion of language services will witness. As previously reported in this Bulletin, the growing need for community interpreters in Ireland is being met with a new training programme in the discipline at Dublin City University, in addition to their already well established graduate diploma/MA in translation studies - a programme which has become even more attractive since the HEA decided to subsidise EU-member applicants' course fees. The localization programme at the University of Limerick is also well established by this stage and the new MPhil programme in literary translation at Trinity will add to the training options which aspiring translators from Ireland (and beyond) have to choose from. All that remains is to hope that this new interest in training translators in Ireland will be matched by a similar commitment to expand the range of languages available at third level to include at least some of those of our new EU member states.

Best wishes,

John Kearns

■ ITIA Open Day 29th May

The ITIA is hosting an Open Day on Saturday 29th May from 10.00 to 14.00 at the Irish Writers' Centre, 19 Parnell Square, Dublin 1.

The purpose is to tell interested parties - particular those at third level - about our joint careers of translator and interpreter. Members of the ITIA Executive Committee will be present to meet and advise attendees.

At present, we have some A4 size posters about the event. If you work in a venue where the Open Day could be of interest, send me an eMail and I shall send you the number of poster you request.

■ Cork 2005: European Capital of Culture

CORK 2005 POETRY TRANSLATION PROJECT

You may be interested to know of a certain major translation project underway in connection with Cork 2005 European Capital of Culture.

13 European poets - one from each of the new accession states and three EU applicant countries - are each being translated by one of 13 Cork-born poets. The Cork-born poets include among others Bernard O'Donoghue, Eilean Ní Chuilleanáin, Greg Delanty, Theo Dorgan and Maurice Riordan. As a result, 13 individual volumes of poems will be published during the course of 2005.

The project is highly interesting from various translation theory perspectives. Some of the Irish poets are learning the source language and translating directly themselves. Most are relying on non-literary, literal cribs prepared by intermediaries. Some are referring to original source texts with the aid of dictionaries, others are wholly dependent on the cribs. Some are endeavouring to be as faithful as possible to the source text, others are using it as a springboard for their own creativity. All have as their priority the production of working, viable poems in English.

The European poets chosen vary between senior established poets and young poets born in the sixties who are in the process of establishing themselves. All are living and none has had a full-length collection of poems translated and published by an Anglophone poet.

The Munster Literature Centre is managing the project and will publish the resulting books. We also publish a literary biannual "Southword". The next issue of Southword is a translation special. It includes translations from most of the Cork 2005 Translation Project participants along with other translations and reviews of several volumes of translated poems. The first 200 copies of the journal will also include a complimentary chapbook of Gabriel Rosenstock's rendering into Irish of the Haiku of Estonian poet Andres Ehin.

We will be having a Dublin launch of this translation special issue at the Irish Writers' Centre on the evening of Thursday July 8th. The launch will not only constitute the debuting of Southword before a Dublin gathering but will also be the first major media unveiling of the Cork 2005 Translation Project. We hope to invite staff from all of the embassies as well as the media. We also wanted to extend a general invitation to all members of ITIA and to that end we were hoping you could pass news of this event to your members.

Joining the ITIA

The Irish Translators' & Interpreters' Association is always delighted to welcome new members to the Association.

There are five categories of membership:

- ◆ Ordinary
- ◆ Professional
- ◆ Corporate
- ◆ Student
- ◆ Honorary

Ordinary membership is open to anyone with an interest in translating or interpreting. Professional membership is for those who meet strict criteria set by the professional membership committee of the ITIA and which is part of the drive to raise the status of the profession in the European market.

Corporate membership is for firms and agencies associated with the profession while student membership is for undergraduates engaged in third level language and/or translation studies. Finally, honorary membership is intended for national and international persons who have distinguished themselves in our professional field.

■ Jobs

Applications are invited for a Lectureship in Translation Studies at the Centre for Translation and Intercultural Studies (CTIS), University of Manchester, commencing in September 2004.

Further details are attached to this email. The deadline for applications is 4 June, with interviews to be held approximately two weeks later. Application forms will be available after 18 May on the University website:

<http://www.man.ac.uk/news/vacancies/academic.html>

■ M.Phil in Literary Translation at Trinity College Dublin

Trinity College, which has the oldest Modern Languages departments of any university in the world (1776), is launching a new one-year postgraduate course in literary translation. The new M.Phil will run for the first time from October 2004 to September 2005.

Assessment will be by submitted essay, translation portfolio and dissertation. The common language is English. Source languages include French, Italian, Spanish, German, Russian, Czech, Latin and Greek.

Candidates should possess a good degree in at least one language, or a degree plus proven language competence, or experience at a suitable level as a translator or writer.

The programme aims to teach the art of translation (including creative, cultural, academic and philosophical translation), and to form professionals who will have learned to work in an ethos of mutual intellectual and linguistic exchange.

The M Phil contains a core course which looks at translation history and addresses theoretical, linguistic and practical issues common to most translation situations. In addition, there are specialised options specific to individual countries and periods. It is hoped to offer options on ancient texts, on the classic novel, and on translating medieval and contemporary literature, from a variety of angles, including practical issues of translation and the comparative approach. Students might alternatively wish to take advanced undergraduate options in those language departments which have agreed to permit this.

www.tcd.ie/arts_letters/translation

Application forms can be downloaded from: www.tcd.ie/Graduate_Studies/g-admissn.htm and should be returned to Postgraduate Studies Office, Trinity College, Dublin 2, Ireland, no later than 1st June 2004.

Translating Otherness

4th-6th October 2004, The American University of Sharjah (United Arab Emirates)

Many thought the fin de siècle would further consolidate the global trend, which characterized the late 1980s and 1990s. The first major events of this century have, however, clearly shown that there is still much to be translated before a global world can be achieved. Events have also demonstrated the resort to translation when cultural conflicts happen. Otherness, inclusion, exclusion, identity, manipulation, promotion of particular agendas, and primary topoi and pasts come to haunt and influence the discourse of translating between competing cultures. The situation can be difficult for languages and cultures from opposite positions of power and/or knowledge.

The conference seeks to explore the role of translation as a primary strategy in cultural representation in today's assumed global world. Issues to be explored include how texts for translation are chosen and imported and how those involved in the translation enterprise operate both on the macro and micro levels for the production and circulation of translations.

Conference Organizers:

Basil Hatim, Fatima Badry, and Said Faiq.

Theme(s):

With a focus intercultural transmission through translation, the conference subthemes will (not exclusively) include: 1. Visions and images of the other through translation; 2. Cultural hegemony and globalisation; 3. Reconstructing modernity; 4. Translation and the loss and/or emergence of literary canons; 5. Cultural diversity and cultural minorities; 6. The rise of stereotypes; 7. Media and the representation of otherness; 8. Language, languages and language polic(ies).

Abstracts (300-500 words) in either Arabic or English (the languages of the conference) together with full name, full postal address, telephone, fax and an e-mail address, and affiliation should be sent electronically by 10 July 2004 to Basil Hatim (bhatim(a)ausharjah.edu). Fax: +(971- 6) 515 2570.

Notification of acceptance and the second circular will be sent out by 30 July 2004. Selected papers from the conference will be submitted for publication with an academic publisher.

Translating Canada: "The Margins Talk Back"

March 10th-12th, 2005 at the Université de Moncton (New Brunswick)

The international conference "Translating Canada en traduction: The Margins Talk Back/Les marges répondent" hopes to give Canadian and international researchers, as well as graduate students, a forum in which to examine what lies on the margins of Canada's official linguistic and cultural dualism in order to paint and nuance a more complete portrait of contemporary Canadian literature - and by extension culture - in and through translation. The conference thus aims to examine the rich diversity of the production and reception of Canadian literature in translation, especially that which lies at the periphery of the literary system - at home and abroad -, in order, among other things, to "recentre the margins" (Daniel Simeoni). It hopes to chip away at the binary model to reveal, through translation, on the one hand, the complexity of what is hiding behind it. On the other, translation may reveal various tensions, with minority groups often suffering from a vulnerable sense of identity.

We invite proposals for papers dealing with one or more aspects of peripheral literature in translation:

- 1) from a theoretical standpoint, relationships between "les littératures de l'exigudté" (F. Paré) and minor literature (Deleuze and Guattari) in translation, and peripheral literature (Even-Zohar's polysystem)
- 2) from a linguistics standpoint, strategies for translating Canadian "littératures de l'exigudté," e.g., linguistic hybridity
- 3) movement of peripheral literature within the literary system: a) from a cultural standpoint - francophone, anglophone, Amerindian and Inuit, immigrant minorities; b) from a sexual standpoint - Gay and lesbian literature; c) from a genre standpoint - children's literature, unpublished theatre translation
- 4) translated peripheral and/or hybrid literature and identity
- 5) translated Canadian literature abroad and its place in the receiving literary system

Special sessions

- 1) Antonine Maillet, translator and translated
- 2) Acadian literature and translation (import: Longfellow's Évangéline, exports: France Daigle and Herménégilde Chiasson)

The conference languages are French and English. Papers must not exceed 20 minutes and will be followed by 10 minutes of discussion. Accepted peer-reviewed papers will be published.

Speakers on the preliminary programme include Sherry Simon, Heidi von Born, Denise Bourque, Lorin Card, Michael Cronin, Robert Dickson, Jo-Anne Elder, Marilyn Gaddis-Rose, Chantal Gagnon, Barbara Godard, Christine Klein-Lataud, Jane Koustas, Michèle Lacombe, Louise Ladouceur, Gillian Lane-Mercier, Katarina Leandoer, Catherine Leclerc, Sonya Malaborza, Jean-Guy Mboudjeke, Denise Merkle, Iulia Mihalache, Sonia Mycak, Denise Nevo, Glen Nichols, François Paré, Chantal Richard, Lee Skallerup, and Judith Woodsworth.

VI INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON TRANSLATION & II INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON PUBLIC SERVICE TRANSLATION AND INTERPRETING

Translation as Mediation or How to Bridge the Linguistic and Cultural Gaps

28th-29th April 2005

The Training and Research Group on Public Service Translation and Interpreting (FITISPos) at the University of Alcalá (Madrid, Spain) are pleased to call for papers for the Second International Conference on Public Service Translation and Interpreting (and the Sixth International Conference on Translation at the UAH) to be hosted by the Department of Modern Philology on 28 and 29 April 2005.

This conference is intended to offer PSTI practitioners, trainers, academics, public service authorities and people interested in intercultural communication a forum for dialogue and exchange of views and experiences, like the previous one held in 2002.

The main topics of the Conference are the following:

1. National and international policies related to Public Service Translation and Interpreting,
2. Public Service Translator/Interpreter role and status.
3. Power and gender issues in PSTI contexts,
4. Linguistic and cultural minorities.

The Conference will include plenary lectures, papers, seminars and round tables. Participants delivering papers will have a maximum of 30 minutes (the discussion/questions time included). The official languages will be Spanish and English.

Practitioners, trainers and academics interested in participating are kindly asked to send a 200-word abstract by 30 November 2004 in one of the two following ways:

1. By e.mail (with the abstract included, not attached) to: traduccion.sspp\(a\)uah.esuah.es)
2. By post: a floppy disk version (PC Word 6.0) and a printed copy to:

VI ENCUENTROS INTERNACIONALES DE TRADUCCIÓN

Universidad de Alcalá
Departamento de Filología Moderna
C/ Trinidad, 5
28801-Alcalá de Henares (Madrid)

The abstract must be sent together with the registration sheet, which can be downloaded at: www.uah.es/otrosweb/traduccion.

The host's selection decision will be communicated to the proposers by 20 December 2004, together with information on registration procedure, accommodation and publication guidelines.

Proposers whose papers are approved will have to submit the whole paper text (PC Word 6.0, both on floppy disk and printed out) by 20 January 2005.
